Lexipol (from Latin: law enforcement policy)

Lexipol is the result of merging Bruce Praet's widely acclaimed law enforcement policy manual work with Gordon Graham's innovative "5 Pillars of Success" approach to risk management. The company has established a new dimension for law enforcement agencies by integrating agency specific customized policy manuals and a "Solid, Realistic, Ongoing, Verifiable, Training (SROVT)" law enforcement learning system.

Modern law enforcement is adapting to changing threats to their community, and increased risk to officers both on patrol and post critical incident liability. Lexipol offers a consistent, integrated program of risk management designed by law enforcement professionals and researched by Attorneys specializing in Law Enforcement Litigation. Because policy and training are perishable tools, our suite of services is constantly updated to reflect the changing and unique needs of our subscribers.

Over two hundred law enforcement agencies operate from our policy manual system published over the last 5 years. Our current clients include municipal police departments ranging from 2 officers to hundreds. Sheriff's Departments, University of California, California State University and Community College Police Departments, District Attorney's Offices, Probation Departments, Port Police, State agencies and others. Many of our clients have their subscriptions financially sponsored by their pooled Risk Management Authority.
